The First 24 Hours

A calm guide to what needs to happen — and when.

The hours immediately after a death can feel overwhelming. You do not need to do everything at once. This is a calm guide to what needs to happen, and when.

Step 1 — Confirm the death

If your loved one was in a hospital or rest home, staff will guide you through this step. If they died at home, call their GP or, outside of hours, dial 111. A doctor will need to attend to certify the death before your loved one can be transferred into our care.

Step 2 — Call us

You do not need to have made any decisions before you call. Simply let us know and we will take care of everything from here — transferring your loved one into our care and walking you through each step at whatever pace suits your family.

Call us any time, day or night: (03) 379 0196

Step 3 — Notify close family and friends

Let immediate family know first. There is no right or wrong order. Take your time. You do not need to notify everyone immediately — that can happen over the following days.

Step 4 — Locate important documents

When you are ready, it will help to locate the following:

- Will or advance care directive
- Birth certificate
- Marriage or civil union certificate (if applicable)
- Any pre-arranged funeral plan documents
- Details of any life insurance policies

You do not need to do all of this alone. Call us and we will walk you through every step at whatever pace suits your family.

Pre-planning

How pre-planning works and what it costs

Pre-planning a funeral is not about dying. It is about living — on your own terms. It is one of the kindest things you can do for the people you love.

What pre-planning means

Pre-planning means recording your wishes and your family won't be left guessing, and this will help ease those decisions at that time.

What a pre-plan includes

- Your preferred type of service (burial, cremation, natural burial)
- Music, readings, and any personal requests
- The people you'd like involved
- Location of important documents
- Any specific wishes for your ashes or burial
- The option to pre-pay towards your expenses

What it costs

A pre-plan consultation with Simplicity Funerals is completely free. There is no obligation to proceed.

Pre-payment

A quiet decision that protects the people you love — and gives you complete peace of mind.

How pre-payment towards your funeral works

Once you decide to proceed, here is what happens:

- We sit down together and record your wishes — the type of service, music, readings, and any personal requests.
- We provide a written estimate of the cost of the funeral you have described.
- You decide how much to pre-pay. There is no requirement to cover the full amount.
- Your prepayment is held securely in The Funeral Trust — independently administered by the Funeral Directors Association of New Zealand.
- When the time comes, your family simply contacts us. Everything is already in place.

Your money is protected

Your prepayment is not held by Simplicity Funerals — it is held independently in The Funeral Trust, administered by the Funeral Directors Association of New Zealand. This means your funds are safe regardless of any changes to your circumstances or ours.

The Funeral Trust is not an insurance policy. There are no personal questions to answer, and no health checks required.

Your prepayment is held securely in The Funeral Trust — independent, protected, and there when your family needs it.

If you receive a pension, it is worth knowing pre-payment towards funerals up to $10,000 are excluded from residential care asset testing.

Protecting your pension

Pre-paying towards your funeral can also protect your eligibility for residential care subsidies. Under current New Zealand rules, pre-payment towards your funeral costs up to $10,000 are excluded from asset testing when assessing your entitlement to residential care support.
